TAIYUE is in the central part of the city near its new ceremonial center, the Giant Buddha Temple. Originally called Shengjie (a classical Chinese name for Tianhou, the Goddess of Heaven), the district was renamed TAIYUE after it became the capital. The Chinese name was originally based on the region's three original streets, Dongbei Road (东22222), Jidong Street (22222) and Fuxing Road (22222). Meanwhile, the first shopping district of the new city, Shimei Square (22222) has opened up, but it is only for domestic and foreign tourists. Shimei Square is the first and largest commercial center of the new TAIYUE. It is the TAIYUE's modernized version of Fangshan Street (22222), which was one of three original streets of the ancient city. Shimei Square is 12.2 kilometers (7.5 miles) in length and about 0.3 kilometers (0.2 miles) wide. Shimei Square is divided into three sections: Labor and Trade, Shops and Services and Science and Art. It is currently China's largest outdoor shopping mall. Shimei Square contains boutiques, jewelry, clothing, food, florists, cafés and small specialty shops. There are many popular restaurants here and the square is constantly bustling with visitors. There are also many ATMs and supermarkets. Shimei Square is also home to the TAIYUE Cultural Relics Exhibition (TAIYUE22222)
